

Cécile Cavalade has 25 years of experience in supporting public/private research partnerships and projects in Luxembourg and Belgium. In 2013, she entered the Knowledge Transfer (KT) world at the University of Liège, to valorize environmental technologies. She then joined the Université libre de Bruxelles as Business Development Manager in charge of spin-offs creation. Cécile is currently supporting universities and KTOs in setting a strategy for their ecological transition, including impact measurement.

Cécile has been involved in the executive boards of several innovation-related entities such as start-ups, science parks or a creative hub. She served ASTP, the European association of KT professionals as President (2020-2022) and previously Vice-President. She is now involved in metrics, impact measurement and sustainability matter at ASTP.

Cécile has a management and innovation academic background. She is French, living in Belgium and committed in several associations for a more sustainable, multicultural and peaceful world.